shooting deer to protect the turf on the new golf course at The Homestead have been confirmed.

Although he has not participated in the project, Mark Connolly, Wildlife Conservation Officer, reported Friday that officers had destroyed some deer that were damaging the new greens at the facility.

He said, "I don't see where that's going to solve any problems. If they've got six deer there, right now, what's going to happen in the fall? What are we going to do then?"

"They should have known when they put [the golf course] in that they were going to have deer problems. Instead, they go ahead and put it in, then turn to us and say, 'You've got to control your animals. They're bothering us.' It doesn't seem right."

He said a lot of deer already winter in the area around the golf course. "What are they going to do when they've got those nice greens growing out there and there are 40 or 50 head of deer coming in?"

When asked if a fence would be practical, Connolly said only one side of the golf course would need to be fenced to protect the lawn.

"It's getting now where we're getting so many complaints, and people are suing us, and we're playing so much money, that we've just got to remove the animals," he continued.

The Department of Wildlife has spent a lot of time and money putting up fences and compensating farmers for damages during the past year, he said, although the figures haven't been totalled yet.

"We don't have the money to spend. So our only alternative is to

Bones Discovered In Wasatch Could Be Human

Wasatch County Sheriff's Deputies were called to investigate a report that an old wallet and some bones had been discovered near Blue Lake, near Wolf Creek Pass.

Sheriff Edd Thacker said the wallet contained the ID of a California woman and appeared to have been in the area since 1968. However, the case of the bones, which hadn't been identified by a California author, the woman had a missing person or wallet. He said the owner is testing the bones to determine whether they are human.

means to kill them. He said 60 permits are being issued for the Heber Valley. The time in many of the deer will be regular fall hunting. The town is down in Heber Valley. The hunt doesn't go in an area enough, just "go in and down."

The problem is that the deer are wintering in their winter because of conditions. The project is a dangle project.

"When they run the highways up the running 24-hour the winter. It puts more into the (Heber) Valley were before. No on the farmers remove them," he
